Abstract: This talk will feature a case study demonstrating an application of numerical optimization in service research. It is designed as an introductory lecture for graduate students at the master's level. I will start with a basic introduction to numerical optimization, and then talk about its application in service research.